Karen: Getting up or going to bed?
me: getting up, finally Karen: Good! Can pick up your laundry today, or you two can come over and do it here?
me: Probably will be good idea, I'm guessing she's about out, I'll get back to you later when she's awake Karen: do you need to change your phone number?
me: nah, was just retweeting that so I'd have it in the record Karen: good.
Karen: The worst thing she can say about you is that you look 14?
Karen: You are right not to answer her -- I just read her twitter feed and she looks crazier than ever, like all she has to do all day is twitter.
Karen: Doesn't she have children and a job?
me: she has children, not sure what her work situation is except that her husband probably supports her from what I hear me: that crazy partner of hers who's now in a fight with her has revealed a bunch of stuff, including how HBGary asked her to help "get me picked up" on stuff, as those e-mails showed me: anyway, will probably need good examples of those things to provide to Tom just for later Karen: did you see the american airlines ticket i sent you?
me: Did, yes, thank you Karen: did you send the BusWk thing to Dan -- just as an fyi?
me: yep, e-mailed it yesterday
Karen: did you invite him or just an fyi me: I said
me: "Let me know if you'd be interested in attending the event with me as a guest, or if you'd like to meet for a drink when I'm in town."
Karen: Great!
Karen: Have you considered replacing the war of the roses icon with your headshot in your twitter thing? Might be a little more professional?
me: well, Project PM is really my best marketing vector at the moment, most solid think I can point to as an accomplishment, basing this on questions I get from journalists, etc me: but me: I'll think about it as an option Karen: project pm is not mentioned in that twitter bio line?
me: yeah, that just occurred to me me: Waiting for the wiki to get fixed in next couple days, then will change it up
